Company Overview

Costain can trace its history back to Richard Costain who started as jobbing builders and undertakers in the port of Liverpool in 1865. The company's reputation grew with building accommodation, becoming known for its 'large gentleman's residences in Surrey amongst others. Its first contracts overseas came in the 1930's for the Trans-Iranian railway and during the 1940's, Costain was involved with the building of the outstanding and innovative Mulberry Floating Concrete Docks for the D-Day Invasions. More recent iconic projects have included the Thames Barrier, the Channel tunnel and Channel Tunnel rail Link to name a few.

MAIN PROJECTS

The following are the main projects undertaken by Phoenix AV in conjunction with Costain.

Kent County Council Project

Phoenix AV became an accredited supplier to the Kent County Council in 2005 and in 2006 were selected as the company to re-equip six new school builds. Three were to be completed in conjunction with Costain (Aylesford School . Ellington School . The Malling School - total value at £ 65,550) and three in conjunction with Verry Construction (Holmesdale Technology College . Hugh Christie School . North School - total value £ 72,450)

Working to two construction companies on 6 school projects consecutively and often overlapping meant for good coordination and project management. Costain proved to be an excellent main contractor and were able to give Phoenix AV all the support required for a seamless and well managed solution.
